

Travel, considered.

An advisor practice for those who'd rather not Expedia it. Stories, opinions, and bookings from someone who actually sleeps where she sells.

— CHAPTER 01 / THE POSITION

The hotel pays the commission. You arrive to upgrades.

Same rate as Booking.com. Different reception. The whole pitch in one sentence — though we will, naturally, write several thousand more.

There is a generation of people now hitting their peak travel years — honeymoons, family weeks, milestone celebrations, business travel — who never had a relationship with a travel advisor. Their parents had advisors. They have Expedia.

The arithmetic, plainly: hotels publish a rate. Whether you book on Booking.com, Expedia, or through me, that rate is identical. The difference is what's waiting in the room.

Through Fora's preferred-partner status across Virtuoso, Four Seasons, Belmond, Rosewood, Hyatt Privé, and the rest, our bookings layer on a confirmed room upgrade, daily breakfast for two, $100–$200 in hotel credits, early check-in, late check-out, and a welcome amenity — all paid by the hotel from its marketing budget, none by you.

That's the entire pitch. Same price. Better arrival.

Most agencies plan resort trips they've only read about. That's how clients end up at Sandals when they should be at Excellence Playa Mujeres.

We know which property has a real kids' club. Which adults-only is genuinely quiet at 11pm. Which $700/night room is actually worth $700.

— CHAPTER 03 / A RECEIPT

What we paid. What we got.

Last month's honeymoon booking. Six Senses Fiji, seven nights, $8,000.

What the client booked: a standard Pool Villa.

What the client arrived to: a Premier Beachfront Pool Villa, plus daily breakfast for two, a $100 spa credit, and a welcome amenity.

"Net value over the Booking.com booking: roughly $3,460. Cost over the Booking.com booking: $0."

— EXCELLENCE PLAYA HUJERES, CANCUN. THE BENCHMARK FOR ADULTS-ONLY IN MEXICO.

This is not magic. It is what hotels pay agents to do.
