How it works

— WHY PEOPLE SWITCH

Same trip. Different arrival.

The hotel charges your card direct. The rate is identical. The difference is what's already waiting in your room.

$2,400 / 3-NIGHT MARRIOTT IN NYC	BOOKED DIRECT	THROUGH PREFACE
Room rate	$2,400	$2,400
Marriott points earned	10x (Bonvoy member rate)	10x (same — your account)

Daily breakfast	$45 / day out-of-pocket	Complimentary (Bonvoy STARS)
F&B credit	$0	$100 / stay
Early check-in / late check-out	Subject to availability	Confirmed

Added value on a 3-night stay	$0	~$430

— HOW IT WORKS

From inbox to booking in 60 minutes. That's the entire workflow.

1	2	3	4
20-min onboarding Quick call. I get your loyalty numbers, billing card, hotel/airline preferences, dietary stuff. Done once. Never repeated.	You text me the trip "Need NYC Sun–Wed, 4-star, near Midtown." Slack, email, iMessage — whatever's faster for you.	Booked in 60 minutes Confirmation lands in your inbox. Hotel charges your card direct. Privé / STARS / Impresario perks layered on automatically.	Something goes wrong? You text me. I fix it. Flight delayed, hotel overbooked, lounge access denied. I'm awake when the front desk isn't.

— A REAL Q1 RECEIPT

One Toronto founder. 32 nights last quarter.

Names changed. Numbers real. This is the actual added value over what booking direct would have produced.

If you're spending 25+ nights/year in hotels and you're not capturing this kind of value, you're leaving money in the lobby.

— FAQ

Things people ask before signing up. Honest answers.

Do I lose my Marriott / Hyatt / Hilton points?

No. I book under your loyalty number, your card on file. You earn the same points as if you booked direct. The Privé / STARS / Impresario amenity package layers on top of your existing status — it doesn't replace it.

Can you book through my company's TMS (Concur, Egencia, TripActions)?

No. This is a personal-account model. If your company has a corporate travel program, that's a different lane. Preface is for founders, partners, and sales execs whose travel is on their own card (or who get reimbursed via expense reports).

What hotels are covered by your amenity programs?

All Marriott luxury & lifestyle (Ritz, St. Regis, Edition, Luxury Collection, JW, W) via STARS. All Hyatt brands (Park Hyatt, Andaz, Alila, Miraval) via Privé. Hilton's luxury portfolio (Waldorf, Conrad, LXR) via for Luxury. Plus Four Seasons FSP, Belmond Bellini Club, Rosewood Elite, Mandarin Oriental Fan Club, IHG Luxury & Lifestyle. About 2,500+ properties globally.

What about budget hotels (Holiday Inn Express, Hampton, Marriott Courtyard)?

These aren't in the amenity programs — booking them through me gets you the same room as Booking.com with no perks. I'll still book them on Concierge or Executive tier (because it's faster than you doing it), but on Standard there's no value-add. Honest recommendation: book Hampton yourself, send me the luxury and full-service brands.

What's the catch?

Standard tier truly has no catch — Fora (my host agency) earns a commission from the hotel out of its marketing budget. The same commission Booking.com keeps for itself. I'd rather make the commission delivering you upgrades than have a faceless OTA keep it.

What's your booking SLA?

Standard: 48 hours. Concierge: 60 minutes during business hours, 4 hours overnight. Executive: 30 minutes business hours, 90 minutes overnight. Disruption recovery (flight cancelled, hotel issue): always within 15 minutes regardless of tier.

How do you handle flights?

Flight booking is Concierge tier and up. Through Fora's Flights Desk I can book published-fare tickets at the same rate as Expedia, plus access to some negotiated business-class fares (typically 10-20% off published business class on international routes). Status credits accrue to your accounts.

What's the minimum commitment?

Standard: none. Concierge: month-to-month, cancel anytime. Executive: month-to-month, cancel anytime. No annual contracts, no setup fees.

Travel 25+ nights a year? Let's get 20 minutes on the calendar.

I'll walk you through your current pattern, show you what you'd save (time + amenity value), and we'll figure out if Standard or Concierge is the right fit. No pitch, no pressure.
